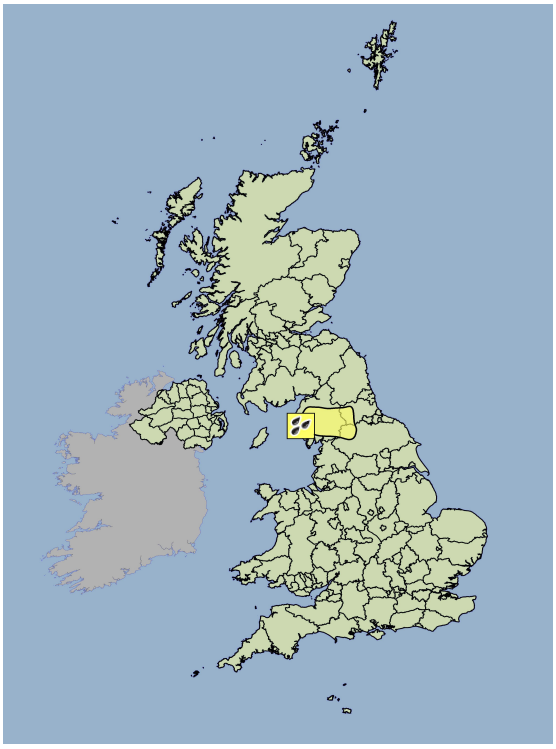
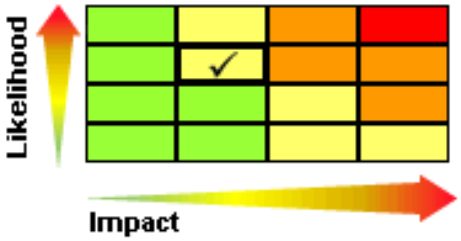
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A front will come slowly southwards across the area overnight into Wednesday morning. Until it clears through, a feed of moisture-laden air will be forced to rise as it hits the hills of the Lake District and Pennines, releasing copious amounts of rainfall and swelling water courses.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:10 on Wed, 11th Nov 2015 until 07:00 on Wed, 11th Nov 2015

Rain will turn persistent and heavy on Tuesday evening, with totals building up from the early hours to exceed 60 mm on hill tops by early Wednesday morning.

The public should be aware of the risk of local flooding.
